By Wire to THE TELEGRAM.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Aug. 28.—The strikers awakened to the fact this morning that the adjournment Wednesday of the conference called by operators, in apparent anger over the failure of the attempted resumption, was mere bluff.

Since then the operators have been meeting in secret. Last night the plans were completed and a move may be expected at any time. It has been decided to attempt to start up several mines along the Wheeling division of the Baltimore and Ohio.

The principal reason for starting tne mines in the Wheeling division is that the men can be unloaded close to the mouths of the mines.

A Sign of the Times.

To the traveler coming into or leaving Greensboro there is no more impressive sight than the view he gets of the Proximity mill, with its neat, white cottages dotting the hillsides and peering from the green woods, the immense weaving and spinning rooms, and the two reservoirs that supply the lage boilers with water. Every spindle and every loom is running full time; no idleness allowed. Orders come in daily from every state in the union and from the West Indies and South America.

And yet where this scene of industry and progress now is, not many years ago was the haunt of the the quail.

The handsome chateau of Mr. Ceasar Cone stands on an eminence to the south of the mill. It is surrounded by porches in the true southern style, giving an especially fine sunset view and prospect of the grounds.

Mr. Pugh and family moved from Randleman about five years ago to Asheville, where he died of paralysis, at the age of 67. It will be remembered that his son George was killed on the Norfolk & Western road about a year ago by being crushed between two cars.

LAST NIGHT'S GERMAN.

A Delightful Affair in Honor of Miss Emma Evans.

Greensboro Germans are always enjoyable affairs and the one given last night in honor of Miss Emma Evans, who is visiting Miss Corinne Callum, on Church street, was no exception to the rule. The hours were from 9 to 1 and the four hours were full of exhilarating pleasure for those whom fresh life and sunny days make such amusement possible.

The costumes of the ladies were a poem in fabrics and we regret exceedingly that our lady reporter could not be present to do them justice—and a masculine pen dare not attempt it.

The german was led by Charles Hagan with Miss Emma Evans. The couples were:

Miss Annie Shober, W. G. Mebane.
Miss Louise Holt, of Graham, Hal Mebane.
Miss Madeline Douglas, H. C. Berger.
Miss Virginia Bernard, Robert D. Douglas.
Miss Susie Reece, T. Horry.

SATURDAY, AUGUST 28, 1897.

You can get the telegraphic news twelve hours earlier in THE TELEGRAM than in any paper that gets into Greensboro, and for four dollars a year less.

THE one hundred citizens of Vance county who petitioned the Governor (who has no discretion in the matter whatever) to have the negro Brodie hanged publicly might easily have been better employed. There is nothing more disgusting than the morbid curiosity, that is so often displayed, to see a human being executed. In our imperfect state of civilization such things are a necessity, and will probably so continue until the coming of millenium, but they should be conducted with as little publicity as possible. That it should be necessary to hang men is something to be ashamed, of not to parade. The ever ready reply that the "example will be beneficial" is the merest rot, and any man who knows two pages of history is cognizant of it. Hanging bees are a form of pastime not very conductive to the growth of the better instincts or the elevation of a people's morals. We do not believe the one hundred represent the best taste of Vance and it is to be hoped that the County Commissioners will see to it that this necessarily brutalizing spectacle is witnessed by as few people as possible.

COL. A. T. CONGER, one time chairman of the Republican State executive committee of Ohio, is out in a letter which will create some unpleasantness for Mr. Hanna. Colonel Conger says, among other things: "My main reason for opposing Hanna now is because I am opposed in principle to the levying of contributions among the manufacturers and the using of these contributions to foist such men as Hanna, Dick and Hann upon the Republican party. As Mr. Blaine said to me, McMinleyism means measuring the degree of protection granted to any industry by the amount of money such industry will pay to the campaign fund, regardless of its effect as to the right or wrong upon the people."

The Colonel's opportunities for getting inside information have been of the very best and he has, evidently, not neglected them. It is reassuring to know that there is one Republican in Ohio who is not awed by Mr. Hanna's boodle and avoirdupois—the only qualifications he can bring to the exalted position of United States Senator.

THE Republicans in their State convention in Pennsylvania laughed at their own platform when it was read. They are evidently waking up to the situation. The rest of the country has long regarded Pennsylvania politics as a joke and Quay as the chief jester.

THAT Montreal bank manager who paid $10,000 for a Klondyke gold brick should come to the United States and study finance. He might be able to rehabilitate his reputation in a country where gold brick methods abound.

THOSE campaign managers who run short of funds should take a lesson from recent Mexican politics. Down there they shoot the other fellow's supporters until he is in the minority. This is cheaper and more expeditious than purchasing.

WE should be very much gratified to learn which is the star in the present performance, Mr. Russell or Mr. Butler. The play bill sayeth not.

WE notice that the Keystone Republicans who raised the shout of "dollar wheat" carefully abstained from saying any thing about coal.

Head of His Profession.

T. L. Brown, who is to take charge of the horticultural department at the Normal College, arrived in the city last night from Biltmore. The Asheville Citizen has the following to say of him:

"T. L. Brown, late of the Biltmore estate, left for Greensboro today to become head of the horticultural department of the State Normal and Industrial College.

"Said a well known gardener of Mr. Brown:

"'A scientific grower has left Biltmore. When he came here, there was little that suggested the best gardening. Things have been successfully introduced by him that were considered impossible in this section. He has laid the foundation of up-to-date methods. He will find a useful field for his future labors at Greensboro.'"

ABOUT BOOKS AND PERIODICALS.

[All books and magazines mentioned below may be had at Wharton's book store.]

IF we were asked to name the ablest work of fiction that has appeared this year we should unhesitatingly select "Quo Vodis," by Henrik Sienkewicz, the Polish novelist, though admirers of Mr. Hall Caine would doubtless take issue. To say thus much is rather mild praise, because there has been a marked dearth of even fairly able novels, though an abundance of the readable.

Quo Vodis, while eminently pure in tone, is scarcely suitable literary for all ages, by reason of the fact that many of the scenes are necessarily strong. The central idea of the book is the clash and contrast of the power of the Roman Empire and the power of dawning Christianity. The conflict is very well projected in the characters that move upon the stage. The author has kept himself admirably impartial and paints the struggle without openly sermonizing or constituting himself a partisian of either, though of course he writes from the Christian standpoint.

The expert in Roman history might be able to catch the author in occasional slips, but to the lay reader none are patent. More than that, he succeeds in convincing you that if he did not live among the scenes he paints, he at least was close enough to see them through his opera glasses—and this is several leagues nearer than the ordinary historical novelist succeeds in approaching.

The book is worth reading purely for the history there is in it. There is no better way of learning history than through even a poor historical novel, if the data be reliable. This is far from a poor book and the reader is likely to find himself better acquainted with the Roman Empire forever after, by reason of a perusal.

Let it not be supposed, however, that the book is merely facts strung on a plot—far from it. It requires no effort to read it, though the padding is a bit heavy in places. The reader drifts easily with the current, unless he is deficient in imagination.

The character drawing is not above criticism, though, he does succeed in making Nero a breathing nightmare. There is only one character that takes hold of the reader's imagination with the grip of the absolutely real, that is Petronius, the patrician arbiter elegantiæ. He is the real hero of the book and, whether the author intended it or not, the other characters revolve around him, as the weak always seem to do around the strong. The author, perhaps, did not mean it to be so, but Pagan Petronius, who is Pagan to the end, is an infinitely more fascinating character than Vinicius, the patrician convert to the new faith. In strength of soul, in the self-poise of intellectual freedom, in a courage that did not even concern itself in the presence of death, Petronius stands for the best in Roman civilization in its most luxurious period.

After the scene at his last feast the reader is apt to find his interest flag. It would have made an admirable last chapter for the book.

There are some other palpable defects in "Quo Vodis"—one is the very remarkable escape of Lygia in the arena, which smacks of pandering to the serving-maid taste in literature. Instead of holding one's breath when the giant and the Auroch are struggling and "sinking their feet in the sand" one feels inclined to smile and ask if the author is not sinking his feet in the sand in his effort to be ultra-dramatic.

***

THE magazines, as usual, for the month of September, when publishers are working off odds and ends in preparation for the new volume, are not up to the mark. The Cosmopolitan has an article on the "New American University," which Mr. Walker is to found and of which E. Benjamin Andrews is to be president, that is worthy of attention as outlining the plans by which a reformation in educational methods will be attempted. Julian Hawthorne has a third paper on India and Mr. Wells' "War of the Worlds" succeeds in dropping from the place of a horribly fascinating story to that of a horribly tiresome one, the transition being made with much evidence of laborious exertion on the par tof Mr. Wells. There are no other features worthy of special attention, though it may be added that this magazine is always worth much more than it costs.

***

HARPERS has another story by Frederic Remington; this one quite manifestly a mere framing for Mr. Remington's drawings. Harpers has not been able for a good many back numbers to come up with the Harpers of a few years ago and there are now several magazines, costing less than half as much, that are of higher literary merit. William Hamilton Gibson's delightful contribution on the "Milk-weed" and Stockton's "Great Stone of Sardis" redeem the number from absolute bathos.

***

THE patiently-awaited biography of the late Poet Laureate will appear in October (Macmillan) as "Alfred, Lord Tennyson: A Memoir, by His Son." The work will be in two volumes, and the insertion of poems never before published, and of letters to friends of the poet, to which no other biographer could have access, will make this life of Lord Tennyson finally authorltative. In this connection it may be noted that Professor Hugh Walker has written an account of "The Age of Tennyson" for the Bell handbook series.

***

JAMES BARRIE has decided to christen the sequel of "Sentimental Tommy" as "The Celebrated Tommy."

***

GEORGE MEREDITH has written a long poem on the French Revolution.

***

A POSTOUMOUS work by Philip Gilbert Hamerton is to be issued under the title of "The Quest of Happiness."

Edmund Clarence Stedman is to issue soon a new volume of poems.

Stewart is now bound over to court on a charge of rocking a Cape Fear train between here and Battle Ground on the 3rd of July. Mr. Tally was a special policeman for that day and made the arrest.

The negro claims that he was kicked and beaten at the time of the arrest.

Both sides had quite a number of witnesses, and various statements were made as to what occurred. The evidence was very conflicting.
